CANADA TO SEND THAW TO VERMONT

HABEAS CORPUS VICTORY TO DAY ONLY TEMPORARY—WILL FACE OUSTING AS UNDESIRABLE.

RELATIVES RUSH TO HIS AID

New York Officials on Hand to Push Charges of "Conspiracy"—Alleged Accomplice Caught.

BULLETIN.

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 21.—Special to Telegraph—The hearing on Harry K. Thaw's petition for release from jail on a writ of habeas corpus which had been set for 10 o'clock this morning, was postponed until this afternoon by Judge Globensky of the superior court.

Sherbrooke, Que., Aug. 21.—Harry K. Thaw will be across the American border in the state of Vermont by night if today's events in the case of the fugitive from Matteawan shape themselves as Canadian officials in close touch with the proceedings anticipate. This was the semi-official information here as Thaw awaits a hearing on the habeas corpus writ his counsel secured.

Official opinion inclines to the belief that under the habeas corpus proceedings Thaw will be declared a free man. Immediately Thaw is released by the court, it is understood, two immigration inspectors will take him into custody as an undesirable under the immigration act and rush the fugitive to Coaticook, near where he was arrested.

To Point in Vermont.

The point of deportation indicated will be Island Pond, Vt., the nearest border station on the Grand Trunk, about twenty miles south of Coaticook.

Engages Legal Talent.

Thaw paced his cell while his counsel succeeded in having his application for a writ of habeas corpus granted and set for argument today. Meanwhile friends improved the opportunity to engage the best legal talent available for Thaw.

Charles D. White, leading barrister of the province, had been retained by telegraph by George Lauder Carnegie, Thaw's brother-in-law.

Announcement was made that J. N. Greenshields, K. C., of Montreal, considered one of the most able criminal lawyers in Canada, had been retained to lead the Thaw legal talent. Mr. Greenshields said he did not expect any difficulty in freeing him under the commitment on which he is held at present.

Arrested as Accomplice.

From among the idlers in the courtroom immigration officers arrested a man giving the name of "Mitchell Thompson," who was identified as one of the two men with Thaw when he was arrested near Coaticook. Although he denied that he had aided Thaw in crossing the border, maintaining that he had met the fugitive by chance, he was held in $500 bail for a hearing Friday.

Shows Strain of Worry.

Thaw indicated by many ways that he is beginning to feel acutely the strain of his captivity and the doubt as to the outcome. For several hours he paced the floor, sometimes stopping and stamping irritably, at other times quickening his walk around the hospital ward almost to a run.

When seen by reporters he was sitting on his cot with his head buried in his hands.

Escape Due to Evelyn.

Thaw told reporters that he was agitated at news of the return to the stage of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, and that it had much to do with his desire to escape.

"If I had stayed in Matteawan with all those raving lunatics around me, I might not have kept a balanced mind," he said. "I might have stood it if I had not heard of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw's action in going back on the stage, coupled with the fact that I could not get justice in a New York state court."

Denies Holding Malice.

"But I have malice toward none," Dr. Austin Flint, William Travers Jerome and Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw have nothing to fear from me, once I am free. Mrs. Evelyn Thaw's contention that I might harm her is absurd. I was surprised to learn of her return to the stage."

Asked if there was a chance of a reconciliation, he hesitated, and then replied:

"I have lost all that was dear to me in the world. I did not want her to go back to her old life on the stage. I desire nothing so much on this earth as peace and quiet."

"I am here to get Thaw," said C. A. Conger, district attorney of Dutchess county, New York, "and get him I will. Thaw will surely be returned to New York state, probably by deportation. If not by deportation, then by extradition."

BASEBALL GAME AT LEE CENTER SUNDAY

STERLING K. C. TEAM WILL PLAY LEE CENTER BALL CLUB.

Lee Center, Aug. 21.—Special to Telegraph—The Lee Center baseball team will play the Knights of Columbus team from Sterling Sunday, Aug. 24, at Lee Center and the game is expected to be a fine one for the K. C. team is a fast aggregation and the Lee Center lads are about as speedy a crew of ball tossers as will be found in the county.

The electric car leaves Amboy for Lee Center at 1:30 and returns to Amboy at 4:30, making fine connections for those who wish to go by train from Sterling, Dixon or from the south.

DEPUTY FINED FOR ANOTHERS FAULT?

DEPUTY SHERIFF W. T. HARRISON FEELS HE WAS VICTIM OF UNFAIRNESS.

Deputy Sheriff William T. Harrison of this city feels that he was the victim of unfair play and misplaced confidence when he was arrested and fined at Ashton Saturday morning for having left his automobile on the streets there without a light on Friday evening.

Mr. Harrison drove to Ashton Friday and left his car in charge of the garage man there, asking him to take care of it that evening in case he did not return. He then went with another party in another machine to Polo and intermediate points, and did not return to Ashton until late at night.

In the morning he was arrested and fined $5 and costs by Justice Northrup. He paid the fine, in spite of the fact that the garage man had been left in charge of the car and was supposed to take care of it. It developed further that the garage man put the car in the garage as soon as the marshal at Ashton called his attention to the fact that the lamps were not lighted.

MORRISON MAN KILLED.

Morrison, Aug. 21.—Special—John Zewiske, a prominent resident of this city, was instantly killed Wednesday morning, the result of falling down a flight of stairs. On leaving his bed room at 4 o'clock he walked to the stairs and reaching the top of the stairway, suddenly pitched forward and fell the entire distance. His skull was fractured. Mr. Zewiske was 92 years of age.

RECEIVED CONTRACT

TO PLAY AT FAIR
The Dixon Marine band has received and signed a contract to play for the last two days for the Lee county fair, Prof. Will Smith, director.

GOT SECOND MONEY.

J. W. Hoyle's pacer Exall got second money in the 2:09 pace at Middletown, N. Y., yesterday, purse, $2,000, and he forced the winner to step the three heats in 2:08 1/4, 2:10 1/4 and 2:02 1/4. The last heat was a new record for pacers on a half mile track.

OFFICIAL HURT.

Dr. Snyder, chief surgeon of the Northwestern lines, and his wife are expected here Sunday to spend the day at Camp Parker up the river. They will make the trip from Chicago in their auto.

Escape Fund Set Aside.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 21.—A member of the Thaw family, who made it an absolute condition that his name be not used in this connection, said that the money used by Harry K. Thaw to effect his escape had been set aside by him some time ago as "an emergency fund."

"Just what do you mean by that?" asked the reporter.

"I mean that Mr. Thaw had the money and that it was not necessary therefore for his relatives to contribute any."

CONFERENCE ON COUNTRY LIFE

NOTABLE MEETING IN SEPTEMBER IN DE KALB FOR ILLINOIS.

MANY INTERESTING TOPICS

Subjects of Importance to Residents of Farm to be Discussed By Leaders.

A statewide conference on Country Life, calling together representatives of every type of farm organization and discussing various phases of rural welfare, will convene in DeKalb the first week of September. The meeting will open with a two-day conference on the country church, followed by a three days' discussion of general rural problems and concluded on Saturday with a big soil day under the auspices of the DeKalb County Soil Improvement association.

Program and Speakers.

Speakers of national reputation will address the conference. One session will be devoted entirely to Rural Economic Co-operation and the Middle Man System. At this time Dr. John Lee Coulter of Washington, D. C., government expert in rural co-operation, will discuss the high cost of living, showing the enormous increase in the cost of food due to the middle man system. Other speakers on this topic will be Chas. J. Brand, chief of the office of markets, Washington, D. C., and Dr. L. H. Goddard of Ohio, member of the new Rural Organization service, recently established in the department of agriculture by Secretary Houston. Following these Illinois farmers will tell of successful local ventures in rural co-operation as realized through co-operative elevators, creameries, fruit and milk associations, etc.

Renting Farms.

Thursday afternoon, Sept. 4, the special topic under consideration will be Tenancy and Landlordism. Forty per cent of the farms in Illinois are operated by tenants and the social and economic effects of tenancy and landlordism constitute the most serious rural problem of the state. For this reason much emphasis is to be given this topic. The chief speaker for this session will be Prof. B. H. Hibbard of the department of agricultural economics, University of Wisconsin; Prof. E. C. Branson, department of rural sociology and economics, Normal School, Athens, Ga., and Charles L. Stewart, University of Illinois.

The ever present problem of road improvement will receive a round also. Some of the most prominent authorities in the United States will be present on Thursday morning to speak on this topic.

The evening sessions will be devoted to inspirational addresses by noted leaders. Social center work for rural communities will be discussed by able speakers.

DEKALB PHONE MAN KILLED.

Wilbur Walker, an employee of the DeKalb County Telephone company, was electrocuted Tuesday afternoon while working on a pole in that city. He came in contact with a live wire while making some repairs to the wires, and was killed instantly.

HAVE FOOD ENOUGH TO FEED AN ARMY

EATS COMMITTEE OF CLAM BAKE MAKES REQUISITION FOR TONS OF FOOD.

ENTERTAINMENTS IN PLENTY

Wrestling, Vaudeville, Music, Etc. A Full Day of Fun for Everyone.

The requisitions made by the "eats" committee of the Elks' clam bake shows that enough food will be prepared to feed a small army of hungry men, and also show that someone is going to be very busy in getting the produce ready and serving it to the big crowds that are sure to attend the annual event on Labor day. Orders have been placed for the following:

600 gallons clam chowder.
1500 steamed clams.
400 pounds roast pig.
800 pounds roast steer.
400 pounds Rock river catfish.
800 pounds fried spring chicken.
10 bushels sweet potatoes.
20 bushels Irish potatoes.
300 pounds boiled ham.
200 pounds corned beef.
200 dozen ears sweet corn.
50 gallons Boston baked beans.
100 gallons cabbage salad.
200 pounds cheese.
10 gallons pickles.
1000 loaves bread.
10 gallons olives.
6 bushels of onions.

Other Attractions.

In addition to several high class vaudeville acts and the Marquette orchestra the entertainment committee has engaged the Empire male quartet, one of the best in Chicago, to furnish music during the day and therefore it is assured that the afternoon will be full of entertainment in addition to the "eats" and wrestling bouts.

Incidentally the bout between Tonnerman and Beale, who wrestled last year, promises to be of even greater interest than that of last Labor day. Beale, who is the champion welterweight of Nebraska, has met some mighty good men since that time and is said to be very much better now than then. He has worked in 85 bouts during the last year and of the 86 he lost but nine, all to men heavier than himself.

CAN HAVE AID ON 249 MILES OF ROAD

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSION SENDS FIGURES SHOWING OUR MILEAGE.

COMMITTEE BEGINS ITS WORK

Left This Morning for Trip Over the Roads Which Are Marked for Improvement.

The state aid roads committee of the board of supervisors left early this morning in automobiles for the trip of inspection of the main thoroughfares of the county, preparatory to preparing a map to file with the state highway commission, showing the roads in this county on which state aid is wanted.

A statement has been received from the state commission showing that Lee county is entitled to state aid on about 249 miles of road, the law providing that 20 per cent of the roads in any county of this class can be laid out for joint improvement by the county and commonwealth. There are approximately 1229 miles of road in this county.

Must Form System.

There is one provision of the Tice road law under which all this action will be taken, that makes it necessary that the Lee county officials determine the plans of adjoining counties and have the roads improved through the county join with those of the adjoining counties, thus forming a system. If such action is not taken by the local board the state commission has the power to make such changes in the plans as are necessary to make improved roads continuous throughout the state.

Consequently the Lee county committee will have to confer with the commissioners of the adjoining counties before definitely determining on which roads work will be asked. DeKalb county has already determined upon its highways, while at Ottawa today the LaSalle county committee is meeting to determine their plan. Whiteside county has done absolutely nothing in the matter yet.

Visit LaSalle County

Lee county's committee when they left Dixon this morning, planned to visit the main roads in South Dixon, Lee Center, Amboy and Sublette townships and then run to Ottawa to spend the afternoon in conference with the LaSalle county supervisors. Returning, it is expected the townships in the southern and eastern parts of the county will be visited. County Clerk W. C. Thompson is with the committee and is noting such changes as are suggested or deemed advisable.

Work Will Be Slow.

The consummation of the road improvement scheme will, of course, take many years, as the appropriations are very small for such a stupendous undertaking, and it may be a number of years before any work is done at all in this county. However the state highway commission demands that maps showing roads marked for improvement be filed by the supervisors of every county, and that the counties each name a county road commissioner, who shall be paid a salary, to be determined by the board, and who shall have entire charge of all road improvements in the county.

Lee Gets $11,577.

Additional information regarding the hard road proposition was received by the county clerk's office this morning, the state highway commission sending a table showing the amount to be appropriated among the many counties of the state during the years 1913-14-15. The allotment, as prepared by the commission will give Lee county $11,577 for the three years, $4,210 being apportioned for use this year and next spring, and $3,157 in 1914 and a like sum in 1915.

The county will be compelled to appropriate a like amount to secure this state aid, which means that in the three years $23,154 will be expended on improving state aid roads in this county before the legislature meets in the fall of 1915, when an

Compton, Aug. 20.—Special—The bodies of the two only children of Mr. and Mrs. Orr of Galesburg arrived Monday evening in Compton and taken to the homes of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Beemer, where the sad funeral rites were held at 10 o'clock on Tuesday morning.

The grief-stricken parents have the sympathy of the entire community in their great sorrow.

MRS. BRISTLE SWALLOWS PIN

A distressing and painful accident happened Sunday to Mrs. Louis Bristle as she was sitting at the funeral of the late Frank Schuler, held at the home five miles southwest of Morrison. It seems that she was holding a small pin in her mouth and became unconscious of its presence there. Suddenly she swallowed it and it lodged crosswise far down in her throat, causing her excruciating pain and a fit of choking. Mr. and Mrs. John Bristle, with whom she went to the funeral, hurried her into their car and brought her to Morrison, where two local physicians succeeded in removing the source of the trouble. Had the pin worked its way down farther the result might have been far more serious.—Whiteside Sentinel.

ROCKFORDITE DIES.

Rockford, Aug. 21.—Lemuel Fuller, a well known resident and prominent agriculturist, passed away at his home here at 6 a. m. Wednesday aged 82 years.

Additional appropriation will be made.

Neighboring Counties.

The chart submitted by the state highway commission shows that Lee county will receive less from the state than any county on the Transcontinental route, showing that the total horse power of the machines owned in this county is not as great as in the others, inasmuch as the amount of the appropriation is determined by the amount of automobile licenses paid in from each county. The total amount of state money to be expended in neighboring counties is:

Ogle	$14,294
Whiteside	13,145
Bureau	12,258
DeKalb	16,662
LaSalle	34,081
Stephenson	7,857

STATE'S ATTY. FEE COLLECTOR

JUSTICES MUST TURN OVER ALL FINES COLLECTED TO COUNTY PROSECUTOR.

MUST REPORT NEXT MONTH

Money Taken in After States Attorney's Salary is Paid Goes for School Purposes.

For the fourth time within a year the law has been changed regulating the states attorney's office. According to the most recent law, all fines, fees and forfeitures in all state cases must be turned over by the justices to the states attorney, together with monthly reports of all collections, and he is to turn the money over to the county treasurer and make report to the circuit court.

Salary the Same.

The states attorney's salary remains the same, but should the sum collected from the justice courts and police magistrates be insufficient to pay his salary, the balance of the amount shall be taken from the county treasury. Any amount in excess of the states attorney's salary shall be turned over to the county superintendent of schools. This latter plan has been in vogue heretofore.

In other words the county prosecutor becomes collector of all fees in state cases in the county and receives his salary whether or not the amount collected is sufficient for the purpose.

ECONOMICAL BEEF PRODUCTION

Superiority of Alfalfa Over Concentrated Food Stuffs in Beef Production Clearly Established.

The Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station has just issued a report of a series of experiments in feeding beef cattle. The report gives the results of four experiments in which comparisons are made of different rations suitable for the economical production of beef, and briefly, the general conclusions are as follows:

In comparing bran, linseed meal, and cold pressed cottonseed cake, each as a source of protein supplementing corn meal and silage, the cold pressed cake proved to be worth 50 per cent more per ton than bran, and linseed meal 18 per cent more per ton than cold pressed cottonseed cake.

In the use of each of these supplementary protein feeds with corn meal and prairie hay, the cold pressed cottonseed cake showed a value per ton 22 per cent greater than the wheat bran, and the linseed meal 28 per cent more than the cottonseed cake.

Largest Gains From Alfalfa.

Where alfalfa was used in connection with corn meal and silage, or corn meal and prairie hay, large gains were made without the use of a concentrated protein food. The gains in both experiments where alfalfa was fed were larger, less costly and much more profitable.

These experiments supplementing what had previously been found, showed that beef can be produced at a lower cost and with greater profit on a combination of the corn plant and alfalfa hay than any other combination of foods. (Nebraska Agr. Exp. Station Bul. No. 132).

A Rich Acquisition.

All who know alfalfa best esteem it as one of the richest acquisitions to American agriculture and in Illinois conditions seem naturally adapted to its most abundant economical production.—Illinois Farmers' Institute, Springfield, Ill.

FEED MORE CATTLE.

Steers Pay More Than Elevators for Corn They Eat—Silage Makes Cheap Beef.

Feeding live stock must be considered from the standpoint of fertility of the soil and not alone from that of direct profit in the cattle or other animals. Beef cattle even more than dairy cattle can make an excellent use of some of the by products of the farm that cannot be used in any other way.

It has been demonstrated at the University of Illinois through a series of years that the money received for corn which is fed to cattle was more than the corn would have brought in the market.

The manure is worth considerably more than the labor involved in feeding cattle. There is not enough live stock in Illinois and this is a serious mistake on the part of our farmers. Practically half of the corn raised in Illinois is shipped out of the state—enough to fatten two million steers. If the manure from these were properly preserved and applied to the land in connection with phosphate and limestone, it would increase the producing capacity of the state $12,000,000. That is not a fancy or a theory—it is a fact. Live stock consumes about 80 per cent of our corn, and the high price of corn is caused by the demand for it to feed live stock far more than by its use as human food. Destroy the live stock market for corn and the price of corn will be much lower.

Summer Feeding.

Dry lot feeding in summer is not advised, but we may have to come to it—it remains to be demonstrated. One thing we are sure of; pasture on high priced land is the most expensive cattle feed. Silage and alfalfa makes cheaper beef than anything else. Both these can be kept throughout the year. No man has yet been found to abandon this method after its adoption. At the University of Illinois the beef breeding cows were wintered cheaper on silage and alfalfa hay than they could be kept in summer. A silo 18x36 feet is ample to supply silage six months for 50 steers. Corn silage and alfalfa hay make an almost perfectly balanced ration and both of these can be abundantly produced on almost every farm in Illinois.—H. A. McKeene, Secretary, Illinois Farmers' Institute, Springfield, Illinois.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

Severe Case of a Philadelphia Woman—Her Symptoms.

Philadelphia, Pa. — "I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa. — "About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysterical spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

COMFORT IN AMERICAN HOTEL

Caravansaries Surpass Those of Any Other Nation of the Earth, Is Opinion of One Writer.

I remember somebody once saying to me a long time ago that the Americans had attained luxury by jumping over comfort. I think there is a certain amount of truth in this, and yet it would be foolish to call American hotels uncomfortable. They are not uncomfortable. Only there is this to be said: That to some people all hotel life is uncomfortable. They hate living in a crowd. They hate bustle, confusion, noise, the arrival and departure of people, etc. And there is certainly more hotel life in America than in other countries. And yet what a saving to the nerves, and to the temper, are so many of the devices and the arrangements in American hotels. The telephone, for instance. If you want a nice test of temper, try to get a number at the Hotel Cecil in London; or, better still, spend a happy morning in ringing up people on the telephone in Paris. In America it is either done for you at once or you know it cannot be done, and the matter is settled. Hotel life in America seems to me infinitely better organized than in any other country in the world, with the possible exception of China. Because when you order a room at a Chinese hotel, in a small Chinese town, the room is built for you while you wait; you choose the style of room, and the paper, the carpeting and all the furniture are put in during the day.—Metropolitan Magazine.

STREWN WITH WAR MUNITIONS

Parts of Colon Found Liberally "Salted" With Ancient Make of Bombs and Grapeshot.

If what engineers and others interested in the additional reclamation work on filled fields in Colon report is true, parts of the city are fairly well salted with bombs and grapeshot. A number of these have been dug up by a suction dredge, which is now excavating near the end of the slip, to the west of the pier at Cristobal.

About half a dozen of the larger projectiles and a peck of smaller balls were found in the stone box of the dredge recently, and it is estimated that a greater quantity went through the discharge pipe into the reclamation fill east of East street, Colon. The projectiles were incrustated with a kind of natural concrete, made up of coral deposits, sand and shells, to the thickness of two inches. Below this was a coating of rust; beneath the steel was clean and well preserved.

The mark, "O. R. D. 1862," was found in the interior of some of the largest projectiles. One, when it was opened, contained black powder in a state of fair preservation.—From the Lima (Peru) West Coast Leader.

Golf Ballistics.

I do not see why all the inventions which have been applied to other projectiles should not be utilized for the purpose of persuading the golf ball to go where it is wanted to go. There ought to be a sight on every golf club as there is on every rifle, so that one might take aim properly. Every golfer ought to carry a range finder, which would enable him to calculate the length of his approach shot, of his chip shot on the edge of the green, and of his approach putt. I think it would also be well if the golfer could be provided with a little instrument for measuring the strength of the wind, the destiny of the air, the stiffness of the blades of grass on the green, and the gradient of its slopes. It would be well if some great mathematician were to compile a series of tables giving the amount of borrow in the case of every imaginable combination of slopes, wrinkles, undulations and crow's feet. What we want in golf is a stream of facts instead of a stream of guesses. For instance, we want to know whether the green is fast or slow, and how fast and how slow. Surely it would be possible to invent a speedometer for greens!—London Opinion.

Unmannerly Tourists.

The Laplander is annoyed with the tourist who visits him. The nature of his complaint may be gathered from the notice posted in the districts of Lapland most visited by travelers, which in several languages runs as follows:

"Dear Tourist: What would you say if an unknown individual without asking your permission or even knocking at your door pushed his way into your home, made himself comfortable on your sofa, peered at everything, rummaged everywhere, laughed at your domestic arrangements, asked how much money you have, wished to interest himself in your love affairs and seized hold of your children to photograph them?"

"What would you do with such an unmannerly intruder?"

Interesting Origin.

In England money is characterized by the word "sterling," because in the time of Richard Coeur de Lion money coined in the eastern part of Germany became, on account of its purity, in especial request in England, and was called Esterling money, as all the inhabitants of that part of Germany were called Esterlings.

Soon after that time some of those people who were skilled in coining were sent for and went to London to bring the coin to perfection.

That was the foundation of the practice of designating English amounts "sterling."

Dementown Doings

Lyle Northrup and Ed Fane yesterday traded their houseboat, Nancy, to Joe Miller for a four cylinder, gas driven, non-rust Buick automobile. Hence, in the near future, feasts that will rival those of Sen. Nels H. Jensen and Herr Otto Witzel may be expected. And in all probability the residents of Dementown will become more insistent that the city council locate a sub-fire station and wrecking crew in that part of the city.

For imagine what will happen, when, while driving slowly along the street, Mr. Fane or Mr. Northrup reach around helplessly for the rudder, or attempt to pull up alongside dock, or throw out an anchor. Then, too, each or either of them might forget that the automobile won't run like a boat and they might leave the machine to its own resources and get down in the hold to bail her out. The possibilities are great, gentlemen, step right up and buy your tickets.

Winning Back Health.

One week of the fresh food, open air, freedom from hustle and bustle, and natural living will fill out the hollows in a tired face, brighten the luster of work-worn eyes, send a tingle through the veins and start a song in the heart. Long rambles through woods and fields, restful hours in the hammock under the trees, congenial companions on the vine-screened veranda, tennis, croquet, swimming, driving, all of these combine to send the girl who seeks recreation on the farm back to her work with a rejuvenated body and a clean, calm, steadied mind.

Town Without Streets.

Morenci, Arizona, has no streets, only steep trails over the rocks and mountains. The town contains no automobiles or vehicles of any kind, and sturdy ponies, mules and burros pack all the supplies, while funerals must be attended by train. It is said that this is the only town in the United States without a street or a conveyance of any kind.

He Counted.

"Go and see if there are any crows in that field of corn," said the farmer to his new hired hand. The boy presently came back with the news that he had counted 54. "Did you drive them away?" asked the farmer. "No, sir," replied the boy; "I thought they were all yours."

CALL OF THE WHISTLE

By OLIVE E. GRAVES.

With a long-drawn whistle, the train from the coast boomed in with a rushing sound of escaping steam, the great wheels came to a stand, people hurried along the platform to their cars, baggage vans creaked through the crowds, a brakeman ran beside the train with an order, some one took it from him and dashed up to the stenographer's office; her chair was vacant, her machine with a half-finished letter still between its rubber rollers, awaited her return.

Morning after morning, week after week, and month after month she had listened to that wild, exultant cry of the monster as it rushed in with its human freight. On a clear morning its shout: "I come—from the sea—the sea—the sea!" brought the roar of the breakers dashing against the cliffs.

To the girl listening with a strained expression on the pale face, its cry was threatening, accusing, pleading, and as the last echoes died away, they were drowned by the cry of a human soul in mortal fear. She saw him again, standing beside her on the rear platform of this same train, a bored expression on the handsome face above her, heard his voice as in an awful sickening dream:

"Surely you must have understood that it was impossible, such a marriage now would ruin my prospects forever."

"But you promised, you promised." "Yes, as many a fellow has promised in an idle summer, lured by the scent of honeysuckle, a pair of beautiful eyes and a splendid August moon."

"But you must, you must. I am not the only one to be considered; there is another—another life to be considered."

"The devil there is! And you think it possible for me to marry you after this? Why, two months from this very day I am to marry my cousin. But I did not dream it had come to this. Here, take this and let me know when it is gone."

The bills fluttered from her nerveless fingers, were caught in the draft of the rapidly moving train and whirled away.

"Oh, very well." And with a grating laugh he leaned over to flick the ash from his cigar. Just then the air was rent by the shriek of the whistle, as the train dashed on to a long bridge with a hollow roar. Suddenly something seemed to snap in her head, and with a strength born of desperation, she had thrown the weight of her slender body against him as he leaned out over the steps; for a moment he had swayed, clutching wildly at something to stay his fall, and then with that horrible cry that rang yet in her ears, he had pitched headlong down, down into the rushing waters below.

There had followed weary months of waiting, and when at last the waiting was over, the tiny life lingered only a few weeks. Afterward there had been nothing to keep her, and waiting only until the grass was green on the little grave, she had left the old home, the little she had learned of stenography was brushed up, and when fate placed the change of a clerkship in the superintendent's office in her way.

Each morning when her day's work began the prayer had gone up: "Don't let it come today, God—oh, not today! Give me strength to bear it, for if I go away I can never come back. Give me strength, my Father, until it is over. You have promised: 'Though your sins be scarlet, they shall be white as snow.' Help me to wash them away."

Each day the struggle had grown stronger. At the first shrill note her fingers would clench on the arms of her chair, her nostrils twitching spasmodically, as the pale lips whispered: "Not today, O God; not today." As it grew louder and reached the full limit of its mighty voice, the blood would beat in her head until it seemed bursting, then as it died down to a whisper, her hands would slowly unclench themselves, and her breath would come slowly between the closed teeth. She had conquered once more.

On this morning she had come to work feeling strangely weak, and as she heard the crowd gathering, the vans creaking and preparations being made for the incoming train, the old and oft-repeated prayer rose again to her lips: "Not today, oh, not today, Father." Then with a quiver, the air trembled with the first long-drawn note.

Slowly, as moved by an unseen hand, the girl arose and went slowly forward, her hands grasped the door-knob and clung there until the veins stood out and the nails turned white under the strain, then seemingly unclashed by the same unseen power, they relaxed and hung limp at her side, as with wide, unseeing eyes, she walked hatless through the crowd and into the sunlight beyond.

WANTED TO GET IT BACK

Contributor to Conscience Fund Writes That He Made Mistake—Wants Money Returned.

All sorts of queer things happen with regard to what is known as the "conscience fund" of the United States treasury. This fund is comprised of contributions raised everywhere from two cent postage stamps up to many thousands of dollars, which people at some time or another feel that they have filched from the United States government in the way of stealing property, evading duties or by some other devious and illegal proceeding. The money nearly always comes in in such a way that it is impossible to trace it, even to the town from which it was sent, and the letter of transmittal is naturally signed from a "Conscience Stricken American," or some such character. But probably never before in the history of the country did any one want to get his money back. The other day one of the newspapers of the city received the following letter, which tells its own story:

"Some years ago I sent $39.20 to the 'conscience fund' in the belief that I had undervalued to that extent a ring which I brought into this country from Paris. I thought the ring was very valuable, but placed the purchase price lower than the amount I paid for it. A few weeks ago I took it to a reliable jeweler and he told me that the pearl in it was an imitation. The ring itself is worth less than $39.20, and the duty on it should have been less than the amount I paid. As a matter of fact, the government cheated me in accepting my valuation. Instead of me cheating the government. How can I get my money back from the 'conscience fund'? Can you suggest anything?"

"CONSCIENCE FUND"

BIG DOME IS A GYMNASIUM

One Use Which Washington People Make of National Capitol—Great Flesh Reducer.

It would not be suspected that the great dome of the capitol could be made a gymnasium, but it is used by not a few persons in Washington and especially by some of the employees of the capitol for purposes of exercise and the like, writes the Washington correspondent of the New York Sun.

Its chief apparatus in that line is the many winding steps to the top of the lantern, 287 feet in the air. You go round and round and round and climb and climb. That sort of thing makes for firm muscles and is said to be best anti-fat cure to be had anywhere and especially in Washington. You can lose ten pounds in one trip.

The thing is done at record speed, however. It is not a slow going up and a slow going down, although with other persons this seems most ample labor, but doing the thing in five minutes and less. It is a rush up and a rush down.

Persons who climb the stairs for sight-seeing purposes are astonished to see Mercuries rush in the ascent or the descent, but, of course, they don't know what it is all done for.

MONORAIL SYSTEM NOT LIKED

Senate Senators Refuse to Ride on Anything That Runs on a Single Track.

There is a much heralded monorail system in operation in the capitol at times—that seems doomed.

The transportation for the senate senators for years has been by automobile in the tunnel from the capitol to the marble senate building. Some one came along and induced Superintendent Woods of the capitol to get permission to install a single rail electric car. This was granted, and at an expense of $9,000 the innovation was installed.

Before the eventful day for the first trial run arrived, several of the senators who had looked askance at the fast-going subterranean autos, declared they would never ride in anything that ran on a single track. Their prophecies have been fulfilled. The first test ride developed that the contraption shrieked, rattled and generally made so much noise that the senators could not hear themselves speak. As one senator said, he couldn't even hear himself think.

The monorail system was attacked recently by Senator Stone in a resolution.

NICK NAME STICKS TO HIM

Congressman Known as "Siphon" Sisson, or "The Sizzling Solon From Mississippi."

Thomas Upton Sisson, member of congress from the Fourth district of Mississippi, is destined to go down in history as the siphon bottle statesman. Which is an unfortunate fate.

When the California-Japanese imbroglio was at its height, Mr. Sisson delivered an impassioned anti-Japanese speech on the floor of the house. "If we must have war," he declared, "or submit to this indignity, I am for war."

Later, in the tariff debate, Representative Johnson of Washington, reproving him for this speech, called attention to the fact that Mr. Sisson had voted last year against a battleship program, and then he referred to the southerner as "the sizzling solon from Mississippi, Mr. Sisson."

If that doesn't sound like a siphon bottle, what does? The resemblance caught the fancy of the cloakroom congressional kidders, and they are ringing the changes on it whenever Mr. Sisson happens along.

NEW CURE FOR SWELL-HEAD

Let the Fowls Go by Themselves Separating From Others, if It Can Be Done Conveniently.

(By MRS. E. M. STETSON, California.) There is a practice among poultry people to catch a fowl with swell head and squeeze the white matter out, thinking that this will relieve the bird of its corruption and cause it to get well.

This is entirely wrong. A sac of covering surrounds this white matter keeping it from going any further than the one organ. When this sac is broken, as it must necessarily be by the breaking of its outside covering in order to eject it from the eye, the contagion is allowed to go down the nose and spread to the whole head.

The bird is then a hopeless case, for there is no remedy now but the ax. The matter which will be found in the blood of the fowl is also of a very contagious nature and contact with other organs will cause them to take on similar conditions of corruption and decay.

If the bird is kept in a warm place and is fed on highly stimulating and nutritious food the blood will finally right itself, but it cannot do so if largely re-infected, or vaccinated with the virus of the disease throughout the entire head.

The proper way to do is not to touch the head, just letting the fowls go by themselves; this is better than the squeezing treatment, but separate them if convenient from the other chickens and keep warm and feed all they will eat.

If the eye is not pecked by the other chickens, as in fighting over food, or the sac is not broken, there is no special danger of the other birds catching the disease, even if they are allowed to run together.

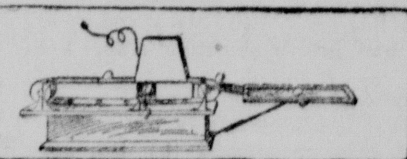

We spent several dollars for roup medicine, worked incessantly, causing ourselves and the poor chickens untold misery by trying the squeezing method, and always lost the cases. Now we let them run and, save for a blind eye, we seldom ever have one die.

MACHINE FOR TESTING EGGS

Electric "Daylight" Tester Has Interesting Automatic Features—Age May Be Determined.

Testing eggs outdoors or in a room having ordinary light, where eggs may be sorted and crated at the same time, is possible with the machine here shown. The outfit is about three feet long, with a roller at each end over which an endless canvas belt moves. About six inches apart on this belt are small metal saucers, each of which holds an egg, says the Popular Electricity. Centrally located above the belt is an electric lamp, receiving current from a regular lighting circuit, or from 24 dry batteries, and over the lamp is placed a hood having an opening in the top.

The belt is run by turning a crank, and the electric lamp automatically lights when an egg passes over it, revealing the condition of the egg to the person looking into the hood. Another interesting feature of the machine is the automatic turning of the egg upon the belt, thus enabling the tester to examine it on all sides. The age may be determined by the way the egg has settled in the shell. A perfectly fresh egg shows a clean, deep orange color, while a bad one is almost black.

As the eggs pass under the hood, the good ones are left to roll out on a canvas extension table, while the bad ones are removed by hand.

Keep Selecting the Best Hens.

Constant selection is the only way to get your flock up to where you want it. When you see a good bird, look carefully and note well her characteristics. Put her in a breeding pen and use her as a breeder another year. Do this throughout the summer and when fall comes you will have made your selection of the best birds and a breeding pen of the best you have.

Build Up Utility.

There is only one way to build up the utility of a flock and that is by careful selection. If each year we save only the eggs from the very best layers for hatching purposes, each generation will become better layers. This work can be greatly assisted by obtaining males from a heavy laying strain.

Tainted Food Dangerous.

Letting the birds get at tainted food is dangerous business this time of year.

HOW MEALY GOT EVEN

By ARTHUR PRESTON.

Mealy, whose official title was the "devil," worked in a job print shop. Probably he had another name, but if so no one around the shop had ever heard it, or would have remembered it if they had. He was a freckled faced youth with watery blue eyes and a tangled mass of reddish yellow hair. What his age may have been is only conjecture, but, seated on the tallest office stool, supplemented by a discarded copy of Webster's Unabridged, he could, by dint of much stretching, just reach the upper case "A."

It was election morning and a red-hot campaign of municipal reform was on. The "gang," realizing that they were up against it in earnest, had figured out the wards they needed and were confining their operations to them. Sparks, the owner, and Mealy were alone in the office, all the printers having been let off for the day, when the door opened and in walked Grogan.

"Hello, Jim," he said.

"Morning, Grogan; how are things coming?"

"It's going to be a hot one, we have got to keep moving. Say, have you any old tickets on hand? Any kind will do."

"I'll see," said Sparks. He arose and went to the rear of the shop where, from under a case he extracted a dust covered package.

"Here's a lot of tickets that were ordered for a nigger raffle and never called for. How will they do?"

"Just the thing. How many are there?"

"A thousand," answered Sparks.

"Good," returned Grogan; "that will be just about what we need."

"What are you going to do with them?" queried Sparks.

"Well," answered Grogan, "you know that they have closed up every saloon tighter than a drum today, but we'll fool 'em. We have got a lot of kags down in Murphy's barn, and each one of these tickets will entitle the bearer to a nip, and no questions asked. We will put them around where they will do the most good. Clever scheme, eh?"

The two men chuckled together a few moments in self-congratulation.

"Well, I must run along," said Grogan. "You'll be out after awhile?"

"Sure."

Sparks, after working awhile, took down his coat and hat. "If anyone calls, Mealy," he said, "I won't be in again before dinner. You can look after the shop, there won't be anything doing."

Left alone, Mealy stolidly continued throwing in the type on which he was working, but rage burned within him. Why should he alone, of all the shop force, be compelled to stay cooped up at work when there was fun to be had outside? He thought of his companions, probably at this moment playing "knuckle down" for keeps or shooting craps for pennies. It was tough luck, and he turned his head and spat viciously from between his teeth. As he did so his glance rested on a small red pasteboard. He gazed at it with unfriendly eye for some time, when, suddenly, his countenance brightened and he slid from the stool, plying a stick of type and tumbling the dictionary to the floor as he went.

He picked up the bit of pasteboard and carried it over to the stock rack from which, after a careful comparison, he drew several sheets. These he cut into small squares and, after a busy half hour at the case and on the make-up slab, set the press going.

At 12, with a snug package under his arm, Mealy left the shop and, after boiling a huge piece of pie and gulping down a mug of coffee at a near-by lunch counter, betook himself down a familiar alley to a secluded corner where the street gamins were wont to spend the noon hour. Calling aside two of his special cronies, there ensued an animated conversation, following which the package was transferred to one of the twain, who promptly departed. Mealy returned to the shop, mounted his stool and worked industriously, whistling cheerily the while.

About three o'clock Sparks came in and graciously dismissed Mealy for the rest of the day, a permission which he accepted with alacrity. Perhaps a couple of hours later the door was pushed violently open and Grogan rushed in.

"For heaven's sake, Jim," he shouted, "how many of those tickets did you give me?"

"A thousand," answered Sparks.

"What's the matter?"

"Matter? All Hades to pay," returned Grogan, excitedly. "We have honored twice that many, and they still are pouring in. Our stuff is all gone, and we can't get more, the workmen we gave the tickets to are just coming to the polls. They swear it is a trick, and have passed the word to vote for the other fellows. The ward will go against us sure as shooting!"

It did, and the city went with it. If either Sparks or Grogan "smelled a rat" Mealy never heard of it, and he kept his own counsel.

"Does your husband run after the women?"

"Yes. He's been a cook-chaser for years," said Mrs. Suburbs, compositely. —Puck.

Its Rewards.

"Is farming really profitable?" "I suppose it is, if you strike pay dirt."

Taxing German Bachelors.

There has been much talk in the United States of taxing bachelors, but nothing has ever come of it. In Strassburg, Germany, the town council has adopted a system of paying municipal employees, which puts in effect a tax not only on bachelors, but on married men with small families. A standard schedule of salaries has been arranged, adapted to the needs of married men with three children. Single men between the ages of twenty and twenty-five years receive ten per cent, less than the schedule salary. When a man has more than three children he receives five per cent. more than the standard schedule, ten per cent. more for five children, and 15 per cent. more if he has seven children. A similar system has been in operation in Halberstadt for some time with this difference, that the extra allowances for children are paid directly to the mothers.—Harper's Weekly.

Blind Man's Long Walk.

One of the most remarkable walking tours ever accomplished was that recently completed by a blind man named Schubert Nichols. He is an Alaskan miner, and his blindness was caused by the incessant glare of the powerful sun on the snowfields of northern Alaska. He walked, following his dog team, from the middle fork of the Koyukuk river, north to the Yukon, to Seattle, Wash.—a distance of 1,600 miles, crossing no fewer than five distinct ranges of mountains. His trip was not without its adventure, either. At one time the thermometer registered about fifty-four degrees below zero, and he lost two of his toes from frostbite. He had on two occasions a pack of wolves to contend with. One pack succeeded in killing and devouring one of his team of dogs before he could drive them off with his long lash.

Chinese Porters.

The contrast between the soberly clad porters of this country and Europe, and the Chinese porters at Kwan Chanzee, a Manchurian town on the Russo-Japanese boundary, is very strong. Instead of wearing caps with the word "porter" printed across the front, our oriental cousins have the word marked in English letters a foot in height, around their blouses. Their business is marked also in Japanese characters front and back. The scene on the arrival of the trans-Siberian express is described by an English writer as resembling a carnival night, though ordinary clothes are worn. This effect is produced in part by the paper lanterns on sticks, carried by Jap policemen, while the Russian train, illuminated with candles, stands on one track and an up-to-the-second American Pullman waits on the other to take on passengers for Mukden or Port Arthur, as the case may be.

Fighting Pneumonic Plague.

Every precaution is being taken to wipe out the pneumonic plague which is reported to have found its way into Lohme, southern Shan States, from China. Unfortunately Lohme happens to be the headquarters of over five hundred officers and men of the military police, but precautions are being taken and it seems as if the disease has been wiped out—for the time being, at any rate. The Shan States, with the opening of the railway, will probably become very much more important from a commercial point of view than they are now, and, as they contain at least one desirable health resort, it would be a pity if plague were to obtain a foothold there now.

STEEL PASSENGER
COACHES INCREASE

In four years the steel car equipment of American roads has increased more than 1000 per cent according to a bulletin issued this week by the legislative committee of the American Railway Association.

It is given out that in 1909 only twenty-six per cent of the cars on the railroads of the country were steel, while on January 1, 1912, sixty-eight per cent were of the modern construction. The reports furnished the committee represent 247 companies, with 227,000 miles of track out of a total of 275,000 miles in the United States.

To substitute steel for the present
 thirty-two per cent of wooden cars will mean an expenditure of $614, 000,000.

Practically all opposition to steel as material for car construction has been overcome by engineers. That it is safer in accidents has been conceded against an argument that the concussion was more dangerous to passengers than the possible breaking of wooden cars.

One of the strongest objections to steel urged during the last three years was heat, that it, the steel was so warm in summer as to make occupancy a burden to the traveling public. A system of ventilation has been introduced by which all steel cars built within the past eighteen months the temperature is easily regulated.

Looking Ahead.

"You are an honest boy," said the lady, as she opened the roll of fine
 one-dollar bills, "but the money I lost was a five-dollar bill. Didn't you see that in the advertisement?" "Yessir," replied the boy. "It was a five-dollar bill that I found, but I had it changed so that you could pay me a reward."

DIGGS CONVICTED; MAY GET 5 YEARS

"Slave" Jury, After Being Out
 Three Hours, Brings in Guilty Verdict.

WIFE STEELED FOR BLOW

Former California Architect Convicted on Four Counts Charging He Took Girl Out of State for Immoral Purposes.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 21.—
 Maury I. Diggs, former state architect, was convicted on four of the six
 counts of the indictment charging him with violation of the Mann "white slave" act.

The conviction makes him liable to five years' maximum sentence in the federal penitentiary.

Diggs, his wife, mother, father and three aunts and Mrs. F. Drew Cam-netti, whose husband's trial begins today, and Mrs. Anthony Caminetti were in the court when the verdict was read. There were six counts in the indictment and the jury found Diggs guilty on four.

Take Nine Ballots.

The case was given to the jurors at 4:30 in the afternoon and they took a recess for dinner soon afterward.
 They resumed the consideration of the case about eight o'clock at night and after a total of three hours and five minutes spent in deliberation reached a verdict.

Nine ballots were taken by the jury and from the first the jurors were unanimous for conviction on the first four counts, but on the fifth, charging the defendant with persuading, advising and inducing Marsha Warrington to go from Sacramento to Reno for immoral purposes, and on the sixth,
 charging the same offense with respect to Lola Norris, they were as obstinately disagreed.

With reference to Marsha Warrington the vote stood seven for acquittal and five for conviction for the nine consecutive ballots. With reference to Lola Norris the vote stood ten for conviction and two for acquittal, likewise
 for the nine consecutive ballots.

Sentence Due September 2.
 Sentence will be pronounced a week
 from Tuesday, September 2. Judge Van Fleet set the bail at $5,000 on each count, making $20,000 in all. I.
 P. Diggs, the defendant's father, and Marshall Diggs, his uncle, were both ready with bonds in the amount named, and United States Commissioner Knull was ready to accept them.

Counsel for the defense announced that they would appeal to the highest court in the land and asked for ten days in which to petition for a writ of error to the United States circuit court of appeals.

REPRIMANDS SAILOR RIOTERS

Daniels Will Punish Men Who Mobbed
 I. W. W. Quarters.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Secretary
 Daniels of the navy has ordered that such sailors of the Pacific reserve fleet who can be identified as having taken part in the riots in Seattle July 18 be punished. The report of the inquiry into the destruction of property of a local organization of the Socialist party and of the Industrial Workers of the World in that city caused attention to speeches against the army and navy which had preceded the attack on a soldier and a sailor, an attack which was followed next night by the wrecking of the headquarters of the organizations held responsible by the soldiers and sailors. Lack of adequate police interference was held largely responsible for the rioting.

SENATE TO ALTER BILL

Owens Says Changes in Currency Are Probable.

Assistant Treasury Secretary Corresponds With Bankers in Regard to Crop Fund.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Senator Owens and his Democratic associates on the senate currency committee began the consideration of possible changes in the measure which is taken up in the senate.

He visited the White House early in the day and held a short conference with the president. He made it clear later that he expected to support the administration bill, but that he held himself free to recommend such changes as he considered advisable.

Senator Owens' suggestions to members of the committee that changes might be necessary in the plan for regional reserve banks occasioned general comment in congressional circles.

The meeting of the Democratic members of the senate committee brought out a number of tentative suggestions for amendments, but no definite plan of action. Senators Shafroth and Hollis, at the conclusion of the conference, expressed confidence that a currency measure would be passed at the present congress, and Chairman Owen said there was "no doubt of it."

Among the suggestions considered by the senate committee were one by Senator Shafroth to drop all present forms of paper currency except silver certificates and replace them with treasury notes secured by a 50 per cent reserve fund, and another by Senator Reed to have the treasury issue money directly to the banks under careful restrictions.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury
 John Skelton Williams said he is corresponding with the Chicago clearing house committee which conferred with the secretary regarding the crop moving fund to ascertain which banks are qualified to receive the $4,000,000 allotted to Chicago.

The treasury department issued a circular containing full instructions to the banks as to how to proceed in applying for deposits, a statement of what security will be accepted and of the times for the return of deposits.
 The principal requirement is that banks in which the funds are to be deposited must have outstanding bank
 note circulation.

GOLLMAR BROS. TO

SHOW AT ROCHELLE

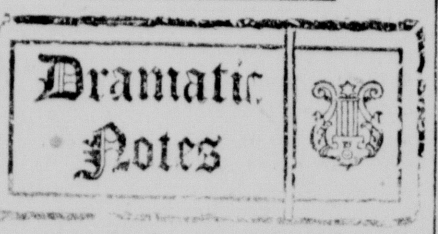

System and efficiency is the motto
 of the modern successful business man. In no business is this motto more closely adhered to than in the management of a large circus such as Gollmar Bros. America's Greatest Circus, which is to exhibit at Rochelle on Saturday, Aug. 30.

In a show the size of Gollmar Bros. if a definite plan were not followed out faithfully chaos would be the result.

When the performance is over at night every piece of show property from the smallest piece of rope or stake to the monster canvas under which the circus performance is given is loaded in the same place in the same wagon, the wagon is hauled to the same place on the same car on the train by the same team. This order is not varied from one end of the season to the other.

A big circus like the Gollmar Bros. moves too fast to teach anyone, therefore, efficiency is the first requirement of everyone with the show from the humblest canvasman to the highest salaried employe on the pay-roll; all must understand their business thoroughly and be prepared to do the work they are engaged for at all times and under all conditions.

Gollmar Bros. have added the entire tire collection of trained wild animals of Herr Driesbeck to their mammoth circus for this season and the big combination will exhibit at Rochelle on Saturday, Aug. 30th.

PRINCESS THEATRE.

The management of the Princess theatre will present to theatre goers
 on Friday night one of the best pictures ever exhibited in this city, entitled "Tannhauser" in three reels, after the famous German opera. The play is produced with the Thanhauser
 Co. with the same cast that played Carmen. The story tells of the love of Elizabeth for Tannhauser, a roaming minstrel, a wonderful story, full
 of photo play work and clever acting,
 following a story of love and adventure.

FAMILY THEATRE

Jess & Dill, an European novelty comedy act, will appear at the Family theatre the last half of this week and Clauss & Redcliff, comedy entertainers, will also be on the boards.
 The acts are excellent and well up to standard.

The pictures this evening:
 The Daughter of the Sheriff, Fatty, the One in the Middle, and The Milburn Confession.

Meaning of Affectionate.

"Affectionate" has changed its meaning in the course of centuries,
 for an "affectionate" person was originally the reverse of agreeable,
 the word meaning passionate or wilful. Judge Knox, in 1554, writes of "the government of an affectionate woman" being "a rage without reason," and a century later another writer deplores the evils of "affectionate" soldiers.

SETS STYLE FOR MEN

PRESIDENT WILSON CONSIDERED THE CAPITAL'S BEAU BRUMMEL.

Adopts All White as the Proper Thing; Cabinet Officers and a Third of Washington Don Washable Clothes Like Chief, Executive.

President Wilson is the Beau Brummel of Washington. He is the mode of masculine fashions.

White goods, a few years ago worn by women and young men, today is the material of the summer clothes of Washington male population. Yes, 33 1-3 per cent. of all the males in Washington wear white clothes or near-white, and all because President Wilson wears it.

It was the first hot week in July that the president of the United States first appeared in white. One Tuesday morning when the thermometer was up about the nineties President Wilson walked from the White House to his office. He was dressed in a pair of white canvas shoes with flat rubber soles, white duck trousers, a white crash coat, white shirt, white tie and a white straw hat. The next day three of the cabinet officers—Secretary Bryan, Secretary Daniels and Secretary Garrison—all appeared in white or light brown, almost white. And the material was either duck, palm beach cloth or crash.

A few days later one or two other cabinet officers appeared in tropical climate attire. Postmaster General Burleson got himself three or four suits of blue and white striped seersuckers. Secretary Wilson called at the White House in a crash suit.

Now all the men in Washington wear either white suits or white trousers and darker coats, but it all is light weight material.

President Wilson is the most consistent wearer of white. He wears it to office, to play golf and the other day he wore white to the ball game.

He went motoring and wore a white suit and Panama hat. Secretary Bryan the only other cabinet officer in town, has been wearing white during the week and on Sunday a white pair of trousers and a black alpaca coat.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who is in mourning, and Attorney General McKendall, are the only cabinet officers who have not donned white or some other washable material.

POLITICS AT FIRST HAND

Truxton Beale to Erect Elaborate Building to House Federation of University Men.

Announcement is made that Truxton Beale, formerly United States minister to Persia, and until recently chairman of the board of regents of the University of California, will erect in Washington an elaborate building for the housing of a federation designed for the political education of college and university men, and for the expression of academic views upon current political matters; "to have a sort of confederation of American colleges and universities for the study of politics at first hand, and to serve also as a clearing house for advanced collegiate ideas."

"The purpose of the institution," Mr. Beale says, "is, first, to discuss, side by side with congress, the most important questions of the day under debate at the capitol. There would be no regular academic instruction, but my idea is to have a two weeks' session each spring, to be participated in by ten men from the senior class of each university or such members of the faculty as are interested in political science."

"I should expect to have members of congress and of the administration address the delegates on pending economic and political questions. Then the university men would spend the remainder of the annual session in debating the matters thus presented to them. At present we have no means of focusing university opinion upon federal politics."

AFFLICTED WITH THE MANGE

Big Slices of Gold Dome of Congressional Library Is Peeling Off.

The gilded dome of the congressional library is afflicted with the mange. Consequently Uncle Sam soon will have to expend about $50,000 to buy new gold leaf.

Big slices of the gold leaf on the double dome of Washington's most beautiful building are chipping and peeling. Other spots are showing the discoloration of the elements, so that now instead of a highly burnished landmark, the dome has the appearance of rusted brass.

Seventeen years ago the last coating of gold was placed on the dome. Now members of congress have noticed the rather shabby condition of the decoration and they expect that soon a request for an appropriation will come from the office of the librarian.

The small dome at the top, the vertical section on which it rests, and the lower and larger dome have an area of many hundred square feet which must be entirely recovered with gold sheets such as are used in sign lettering.

NOTE DEMANDS HUERTA BE OUSTED

Mexican President Asked to Resign and Not Again to Seek the Presidency.

EARLY ELECTIONS SOUGHT

Reply Rejecting Plans Professes Belief That Wilson Lacks Popular Support—Sees Brief Democratic Regime.

City of Mexico, Aug. 21.—With revelation of the proposals which the Washington government made through John Lind to Provisional President Huerta, all of which were rejected, Mexico's foreign minister, Frederico Gamboa, announced that negotiations with Mr. Lind were "progressing cordially and satisfactorily" and that he believed a "satisfactory arrangement" would be made "within a few days."

The proposals of the Washington government, which Mexico rejected in toto, were:

1. Complete cessation of hostilities.
2. That President Huerta resign in favor of a president ad interim.
3. The fixing of an early date for the presidential elections.
4. That General Huerta should not be a candidate for the presidency.

An additional feature of the American note was the request for a reply to the question as to what, in the opinion of General Huerta, the present conditions were due and what the remedy.

Blame U. S. for Revolt. General Huerta's flat refusal to accede to the four demands would appear to be sufficient reason to consider that negotiations between the two governments were concluded, but in replying to Washington's pointed request for an explanation regarding conditions in Mexico and the cause General Huerta himself injected into the controversy what might be regarded as a counter demand—namely, that of recognition of his regime.

In a general way Huerta places the blame for Mexico's civil war on the United States. He insists that had it not been for President Wilson's refusal to recognize his administration he would long ago have suppressed the rebellion, and even now, he asserts, the United States can indirectly enable him to restore order in a comparatively short time. He asks of the United States government only recognition and the withdrawal of the American battleships.

The last section of a long cypher report prepared by President Wilson's personal representative, Mr. Lind, should have reached Washington during the day, but for three days the American government has been fully aware of the character of Huerta's reply, as a summary was sent soon after the delivery of the reply at the embassy.

May Make Counter Proposal. At the American embassy no one is promising or denying a resumption of the negotiations. Mr. Lind did not appear optimistic on this score.

As to the question of elections, these have been called for October 26.

Huerta Blames Democrats. Washington, Aug. 21.—Intimations are contained in Provisional President Huerta's reply to the American note presented by John Lind that President Wilson is not backed by congress or the American people in his stand against recognition of the Huerta government in Mexico.

Referring to attacks on the Washington administration by members of congress and pointing to the recommendations of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson for recognition, Huerta declared he is entitled to be recognized. He holds that the Democratic party's power is temporary and argues that recognition of his government is a partisan question in the United States. He intimates that he reaches his conclusion on private advice from Washington.

This information was obtained from those who know the contents of the note.

GLYNN GAINS ON SULZER

Given Rooms for Use as Acting Governor of New York.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Martin H. Glynn was recognized as acting governor of New York by the board of trustees of public buildings. Two rooms in the capitol were designed as "the executive chamber" for his use. These were the assembly parlor and a committee room, both on the third floor.

The executive offices to which the impeached Governor Sulzer clings are on the second floor.

A clash of authority between the rival governors may follow. Mr. Glynn announced he would call on the executive clerical staff, which has remained loyal to Sulzer, for any service that might be needed. An attempt at dismissal will follow refusal of any employee to obey either claimant to the governorship.

Whitlock Not to Run Again.

Toledo, O., Aug. 21.—Mayor Brand Whitlock will not again run for the office of mayor of Toledo. He officially notified his secretary, Bernard Bailey in writing as follows:

"I will not run under any circumstances; that is settled."

Whitlock expects to be the new ambassador to Belgium.

FEWER DEATHS AMONG BABIES

GOVERNMENT ISSUES TIMELY MONOGRAPH ON THE SUBJECT OF INFANT MORTALITY

MISS JULIA C. LATHROP'S WORK

Unborn's Health Depends On Food. Some Rules Are Given Mothers

Washington, D. C., Aug.—Mothers and prospective mothers will be deeply interested in a series of monographs on children which is to be issued by Miss Julia C. Lathrop, chief of the government children's bureau.

The United States census bureau estimates that 300,000 babies less than one year old died last year in this country and Miss Lathrop asserts that at least half of these deaths could have been prevented.

The latest reports of the census bureau show that slightly more than 42 per cent of the infants dying under 1 year of age in the registration area in 1911 did not live to complete the first month of life, and that of this 42 per cent almost seven-tenths died as a result of conditions existing before they were born or of injury or accident at birth.

Of those that lived less than one week, about 8 per cent died of such causes and of the number that lived less than one day 94 per cent died of these causes.

Thus, Miss Lathrop says, the children's bureau was drawn inevitably to begin its contemplated series of monographs on the care of children by a statement regarding prenatal care for mother and child.

The treatise is the work of Mrs. Max West of the bureau staff and was written from the standpoint of a woman who has university training, experience in government research, and who is herself the mother of a family of young children.

The monograph, Miss Lathrop says, is addressed to the average mother of the country and without any purpose to invade the field of the medical or nursing professions but rather to furnish such statement regarding hygiene and normal living, as every mother has a right to possess in the interest of herself and children.

On Child Bearing

The first chapter of the monograph deals with the child bearing woman and the diet during that period. It is stated that the food of a prospective mother need not differ materially from that to which she has been accustomed provided her diet previously was chosen with due regard to its suitability.

Any food or drink which causes distress or even discomfort should be avoided at all times, but with this exception the woman may safely follow the dictates of her appetite as to the choice of food.

It will be found that a light, laxative diet which is at the same time satisfying and nutritious, will tend to keep her in health. An ideal diet includes a relatively large proportion of liquids, a small proportion of meats, and a correspondingly generous proportion of fresh fruits and vegetables.

Some rules Submitted

The most important rules for health are thus stated:

Guard scrupulously against continued constipation.

Avoid an excessive quantity of meat.

Drink a liberal amount of water.

Take plenty of outdoor exercise and keep all the rooms of the house well ventilated day and night.

Bathe every day.

Wear light but suitably warm and comfortable clothing.

Sleep at least eight hours out of twenty-four and do not become over tired at any time.

Have the urine examined at stated intervals.

Strive to be happy, seek self control, and do not worry.

Consult a doctor when symptoms of illness persist.

The monograph says there is current much misinformation concerning the harm that can be done to a child through a gloomy or nervous state of mind of the mother.

Those who hold to this possibility consider that if the mother is injured in some way or sees another person injured or observes a deformed or defective person the impression thus made upon her mind will repeat itself in some corresponding defect in the child's body.

The monograph states that doctors and other scientists are now practically agreed that, most happily for all concerned, these opinions have no basis in fact.

A physical explanation why such a belief has little foundation is given. Nature, it is declared, has erected a barrier between mother and child which prevents the transmission of baleful impressions.

No Harm From Fright

"An American obstetrician of wide experience," according to the monograph, "says that it is his opinion, based on an observation extending over a number of years among all classes of mothers, that the cause which was expected to show some harmful results to the baby was in effective in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, and that the hundredth was a coincidence."

"When one considers the number of strange and unhappy things that happen about us every day it is not remarkable that pregnant women should encounter them sufficiently often to bring about many odd and striking coincidences."

"The harm a prospective mother may do her child is not in the fortuitous accidental manner above suggested, but rather by her failure to order her own life in the way that will result in the highest degree of health and happiness for herself, and therefore, for the child although the child is undoubtedly protected from direct injury by means of occurrences outside the control of the mother; nevertheless it is subject to harm or benefit from conditions that are usually quite within her control."

Nutrition Means Much to Unborn.

"The child is entirely dependent for its development upon the materials of nutrition, which it extracts from the blood of the mother in those mysterious processes of interchange which occur, and it is only through nutrition that the mother can build up for herself a sound and normal body and brain."

"If then she lives in such a manner as to establish and conserve her own health, taking plenty of sleep and exercise, eating sensibly of simple food, and in every way striving to take the best possible care of her own body, so that the digestive, assimilative and excretory functions are carried out in the highest degrees of efficiency, she can be quite sure that the child will be able thereby to build up for himself a sound and normal body and brain."

COACH INSPECTOR TO BE SELECTED

NEW LAW OF ADVANTAGE TO TRAVELING PUBLIC WILL START NEW SYSTEM OF SIGNALS

Copies of the laws enacted at the last session of the Illinois legislature have been received in this city, and there are several which are of more than usual interest. Two are of great interest to the railroad men of the state and to the traveling public.

The one law covers the inspection of passenger trains by representatives of the Interstate Commerce commission, which will afford the public safer and more sanitary coaches. It will be the duty of the men named by the commission to examine the interior of each coach upon its arrival at a terminal and also upon the departure of the coach from any terminal. If the coach is not properly cleaned it will not be permitted to go on the run. The coach will have to be taken from the train and cleaned. The inspector will also see that all parts of the coach are in safe condition to make the trip and they will suggest improvements, if any are needed. The law also make such repairs as are needed before the coaches can make the trip. The inspectors must have had at least seven years of actual railroad service before they can qualify for the position.

Another act is one in which all railroad companies will be forced to provide suitable wash rooms for their men, regardless of what department they may be in.

New Code of Signals

New signals will soon be effective on the Illinois Central railroad. One of them consists of a wigwag to designate overheated journals. To convey the news to the engineer, the rear brakeman grasps his nose between the thumb and first finger of his right hand and points with his left hand to the road bed. Passengers are requested not to be offended when they see this signal, the brakeman is only doing his duty.

For a loose and hanging car door the brakeman waves his hand in exact counterpart of a swinging door.

The "all clear" sign will be made by raising the hand above the head and holding it stationary in that position for a period of about one half minute.

Carries Harvest Hands.

The Illinois Central is one of the roads which transports from the south many of the husky farm laborers who help the northern farmer harvest their bounteous crops. Man thousands are carried to the harvest field every year.

Prepare for Grain

Railroads and freight handlers are now giving their attention to the first movement of grain, which is just commencing. As yet the movement is light but will gradually increase until the big movement of September and October is reached.

Still Handling Fruit

A good business in the transfer of fruit is still reported, this being one of the best seasons in recent years with regard to the handling of fruit as the western and southern orchards had a splendid season. Traffic in other grades of freight is also reported by the handlers to have been very good this year and a very busy season is recorded.

CHICAGO ROAD

Chicago, Road, Aug. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Scott and son Walke were in Dixon Saturday.

Miss Edith DuBois is still staying in Dixon at the home of L. Burrows. Mrs. Burrows is very ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kinney entertained at dinner on Sunday for Ernest Moeller and family and Miss Anna Johnson.

Mrs. Beal and Mrs. Cook, who have been visiting at the Duffy home, went to Mendota Sunday to spend a week. They will afterwards return to finish their visit with Mr. and Mrs. Duffy.

The picnic at St. James church was very well attended. The crowd was large. The day was pleasant. The services were very good.

Mrs. Frank Cramer went to Sterling Tuesday to visit her mother.

DECAYED TEETH A MENACE

Should Be Filled, Crowned or Extracted—Millions of Germs in Broken Roots.

No decayed teeth must be kept in the mouth; either they must be filled, crowned or extracted. Broken down roots carry millions of disease germs about them, and must be removed. Fillings which have rough or overhanging edges, especially at the gums, are dangerous to the adjoining teeth in account of the deposits and germs which collect at such places, and also because of the irritation caused to the gums by such conditions, bringing in time diseases of the sockets and loosening of the teeth. The same thing applies to crowns, whether they carry a bridge or not; in case they have a rough, overhanging edge where they join a root, in case some part of them does not fit tightly enough around the root to prevent the slightest gap under it, or in case the edge of a crown presses into the gum, however little, disease will occur. After all the conditions just mentioned have been corrected, and the mouth is in good order, it is time for the dentist to most carefully remove the slightest deposits of any kind which may still be present around any teeth, especially near and at the gums, and then begins the time when the person can take care of the mouth in a manner protecting both health and teeth. If, unfortunately, a plate must be worn, it must be cleaned just as carefully as the natural teeth, and as often, because deposits full of disease germs will otherwise form on it, too. A plate should never be worn while one sleeps. During that time it should be bathed in water with a teaspoonful of borax or baking soda in it, or in the mouth washed used for natural teeth.

The time at which it is most necessary to cleanse the mouth is at bed time. If one sleeps with a mouth in which remnants of food are decomposing, and this begins a short time after eating, the mouth being quiet during sleep, the cheeks and the tongue not rubbing the gums and teeth, and the saliva not flowing to give them the bath intended by nature, germs do their worst because they are not disturbed. Therefore, if you cannot clean your mouth more than once in twenty-four hours, it is at bed time that you should do it. But, really, only one bed time cleansing in twenty-four hours must be looked at in the light that "a half loaf is better than no loaf at all." That one regular, thorough, every night bed time cleansing will certainly do much valuable good is true, but in order to obtain the best results, more frequent cleansings are needed. Next to the bed time cleansing, the most important one is in the morning after breakfast. This enables us to avoid the decomposition of food remnants in the mouth going on for a whole day; germs multiplying more and more as hours pass. There is really no reason why any one could not cleanse their mouth just before they leave their home in the morning. Getting up only five minutes earlier will allow of it.

An Unforgotten Post. That a statue should have been erected to Tom Moore a century and a third after his birth and in a country far from his own shows that the taste for good poetry has not entirely disappeared from the land. It is well that this bust should have a place in the Corcoran art gallery, and it is to be hoped that its presence there will help to stimulate a taste for the exquisite work of the poet whom it commemorates.

A Curious Habit.

It has been remarked that dogs turn round several times before lying down to rest. The habit is supposed to have been back to the time in dog history when the animal was wild and lived in jungles and tall grass. At this time it was necessary for him to twist the grass into a comfortable shape for a bed. The habit, fixed far back at this stage of the canine's existence, is still instinctive with it.

DINING TABLES

The Hastings Dining Tables made at Hastings Michigan, are indeed worth getting acquainted with, they are the kind of table that clear away the clouds in your table sky and let the sun shine through. And we are going to tell you a few of the reasons why we want you to know more about Hastings Tables.

Hastings are extremely Careful about the timber they put into their Tables, they use nothing but carefully selected Northern Crown White Oak Stock, and then they Kiln Dry all their own lumber in their own peculiar careful way, so there is not a question of doubt but their Tables will stand for years and years without springing or warping in the least, and you know that this feature alone is worthy of the most favorable comment.

Construction with Hastings is a religion, shabby, hazardous work in their factory has long since been relegated to the boneyard, they have careful, interested workmen in Hastings factory who do their work right all the time, so every Table has a guarantee as good as any bond ever written, for it bears the name "Hastings."

KEYES, AHRENS, OGDEN CO

ILLINOIS SOCIETY GIRL TO TEACH IN LABRADOR

Miss Mildred Armour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Cochrane Armour of 1608 Ridge avenue, Evanston, Ill., who made her debut in society only two years ago, has forsaken social joys to teach a kindergarten in classes in Dr. Wilfred Grenfell's mission at Battle Harbor, Labrador.

Miss Armour, who was a Smith college student, sailed a few days ago on the famous mission schooner, George B. Cluett, which left the old gashouse pier in Boston amid the cheers and shouted good wishes of many Boston society folk.

With Miss Armour as a fellow teacher is Miss Carolyn Woolley, a Hartford (Conn.) society girl and a classmate at Smith college.

Others on the little craft are Dr. and Mrs. John Mason Little, Jr., and their year-old baby, John Mason Little III, known as "Show Baby Little" because he was born in Newfoundland; Miss Louise Little, a sister of Doctor Little; Miss Jessie Luther of Providence, R. I., and a dozen other society and professional folk.

"Of course I cannot help feeling just a little anxious about Mildred going away off to that cold country," said Mrs. Armour, "but I understand that the Cluett is a very good vessel and they have very skillful officers and crew on board."

"Mildred, you know, was in Smith college and Doctor Grenfell has always obtained volunteer teachers there. My daughter will teach a kindergarten class in the mission at Battle Harbor, which is attached to the big hospital Doctor Grenfell maintains there. I am sure she will enjoy the life and will get the best of care."

The Cluett, it is said, will touch first at St. Anthony's, Newfoundland, where Baby Little was born, and then will proceed to Battle Harbor and Indian Harbor in Labrador.

BREEDING OF PIGEONS

Eight or Nine Pairs of Squabs in Year is Big Record.

In Most Cases Disease Will Be Found in Lofts Where Birds Do Not Receive Proper Attention—Age That is Profitable.

(By C. GRAHAM.) Pigeons lay only two eggs at one laying period—this requiring three days. They rest a day between the first and second egg. They immediately begin sitting. The period of incubation is 17 days, and for the first five to seven days of the squab's life

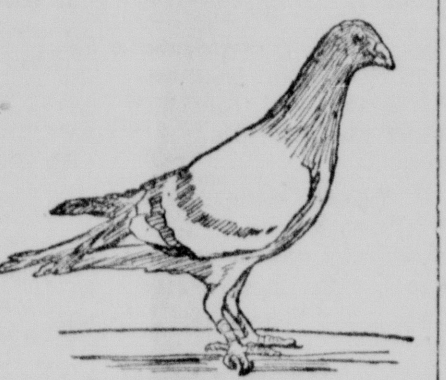

Homer Cock—This is the Type Generally Used in Squab Breeding.

It is nourished on "pigeon's milk." I have never known of a pair of pigeons that would begin breeding or even preparing a nest for a second family until after these youngsters were beginning to take ordinary feed instead of this pigeon milk. Of course, the old birds feed the young during their entire life as squabs, or until they are able to leave the nest, and often they feed them for a few days on the floor. Eight or nine pairs of squabs are all that can be expected from a pair of breeders during a year, and such breeders are very hard to find.

In order to avoid dark-skinned squabs it is advisable not to breed from birds that have very dark legs or beaks. Many amateurs have an idea that a bird with black plumage is more likely to be dark-skinned than a white-feathered bird is, but this is not the case, as some of the whitest-skinned squabs that have been produced were from black pigeons.

It is to be regretted that disease is becoming more common among pigeons. In most cases disease will be found in lofts where birds have not had proper attention, or where they are so housed as to weaken their vitality or that of their offspring. The life of a breeding bird is generally considered to be ten years, but there are very few pigeons that will pay for their feed after the seventh year, and it is seldom that they will leave any profit after the fifth year. During the second and third years they are supposed to be in their prime.

For this reason, in figuring on a flock of pigeons, it should be remembered that they have practically passed their usefulness in six or seven years, and therefore one-sixth or one-seventh of their original cost should be charged against them each year so that at the end of the time mentioned they will have paid for themselves. In making this statement I have been careful to consult with many of the leading squab producers in the country, and their books show that they lose about 4 per cent of their young breeders yearly, besides reckoning that when the birds are seven years old they should be sold. They also estimate that about 5 per cent of the squabs that are hatched do not mature for market and that about 3 per cent of the eggs that are laid do not hatch, although flocks have been known where 50 per cent of the eggs did not hatch, and 75 per cent of the young did not reach maturity, but these cases are exceptions and there is some special reason for this unusual loss.

Suitable Coops.

As the chicks in the flock grow larger the small chicken coops usually used to shelter them become too small and large, open-front coops, which can be moved from place to place, should be provided.

Poultry Pay Best.

There is no kind of stock that pays a higher rate of interest on the amount invested in poultry, although a great many farmers consider it of little if any value.

Place for Everything.

It is a great waste of time to pull and haul over a dozen things in the corner of the barn or the empty granary to find what is needed. Better have a place for everything.

Food Supply Lacking.

If an orchard is on a decline it is a pretty sure indication that the available food supply in the soil is being exhausted. Fertilizers and cultivation are needed.

POULTRY FACTS

SUMMER CARE OF THE EGGS

Practice of Holding Product for Higher Market Price in Autumn Results in Serious Loss.

(By N. E. CHAPMAN, Extension Poultry Specialist, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn.)

In the summer months, eggs should receive the same care and consideration as sweet milk and cream, and be marketed daily, if possible. They should not be exposed to draughts of warm air, and should be protected from the rays of the sun and from moisture, in handling, marketing and shipping. The common practice of holding eggs for a higher market price in autumn results in poor quality and serious loss instead of gain. Under ordinary farm conditions, eggs should never be held. The farmer, however, is not the only one responsible for the shrunken eggs on the market. Country merchants have been equally blamable for the annual loss.

A fresh egg will absorb odors as readily as fresh milk. Mustiness or moldy growth in egg cases or fillers will taint the egg and lower its quality.

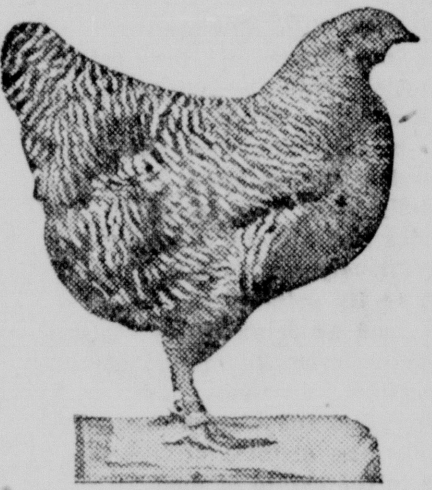

Eggs should not be stored in musty cellars, or in rooms with fruit, vegetables or fish.

The flock should never be allowed to drink filthy water, be fed musty grains or strong-flavored vegetables, as onions and garlic, or given access to decaying meat or substances that will flavor the product and impair its quality.

ADVICE CAN'T BE FOLLOWED

Impossible to Have Egg Layers Alone, Consequently Farmers Must Keep General Purpose Fowl.

The advice is given generally to select an egg breed for egg production, but on the average this advice cannot be followed very well, as the principal egg breeds, Leghorns, Anconas and Minorcas are poor mothers and can scarcely be kept to advantage unless incubators and brooders are employed in raising the chickens. Consequently a majority of farmers and back yard poultry men are forced to keep a general purpose breed. Of these the Barred Plymouth Rock, the Wyandotte, the Rhode Island Red and the Orpington are all deservedly popular. Far too many flocks of mixed fowls or mongrels are kept. These are less profitable than the pure bred birds. Eggs uniform in color and size are worth more in the markets than eggs mixed in color and size. The same principle holds true when any considerable quantity of market poultry is to be disposed of. Then, too, the farmer with a good flock of pure bred birds can always sell eggs for hatching at a considerable increase over the ordinary market price for table eggs, and in the fall many of the surplus cockerels can be sold to good advantage for breeders.

Cleanliness.

There is one word which poultrymen must never forget and that is cleanliness. Without it failure is certain. The ammonia fumes from droppings left under the roosts are sure to produce roup and throat troubles which are particularly fatal. Lice will breed and thrive in filth, and will ruin your flock in a short time, unless exterminated.

Keep Chicks in Yard.

The best way is to keep the chicks in a yard that is enclosed with poultry netting until they are fully feathered out. In this manner they are at hand when you want them and are not roaming off and getting lost. This will also keep them from being killed by cats, dogs, etc.

Dark Colored Eggs.

The color of the eggs sold today are considerably darker than they averaged 30 years ago, all of which proves that Asiatic blood has been largely introduced throughout the country, and that it has its effect on the egg.

Late Hatched Chicks.

Late hatched chicks are more apt to suffer from the big head louse than the early ones. If the youngsters look droopy pretty sure thing that the louse is busy. Little sweet oil on the top of the head will relieve them.

NEW CODE IS ADOPTED

STATE, NAVY AND ARMY TO SPEAK COMMON LANGUAGE.

Keys Are Sometimes Lost and Discarded in the Possession of Individuals Who Make Effort to Hold Up Uncle Sam.

When the United States next goes to war her armed forces and her more subtle forces of diplomacy will speak a common language for the first time, for there has recently been completed a secret code for common use between the state, war and navy departments.

Heretofore the three departments, which include all the forces that would come in contact with an enemy in war time, have used secret codes peculiar to each. The state department has employed several codes, the war department several others, although chiefly one, the Breckley code, and the navy department others. They have points in common, but they are nevertheless distinct codes. The key to one would not afford a translation of a message written in another code.

The new interdepartmental code is designed not only for use in war but in such emergencies as would require quick secret communication between representatives of the various divisions.

Code keys have a habit of getting lost. It is to the interest of foreign powers to know the secret language a possible antagonist may speak. Any multiplication of codes increases the opportunities for valuable information of this character to get lost or stolen.

For instance, the code now chiefly used by the state department is about four years old and was adopted chiefly because the old code had become the common property of several nations across the water. When George von Lengerke Meyer, formerly ambassador to Russia, and more recently secretary of the navy, was in St. Petersburg, a diplomat visited him one day to offer to him a little book. The book had mysteriously found its way to Bucharest and had fallen, as such books have a habit of falling, into the hands of a foreign office. When Mr. Meyer saw the book he at once recognized the state department code key.

Some time later a letter came to the American embassy in Berlin stating that the writer possessed a similar key. He offered to sell it, suggesting that possibly the United States foreign office would not care to have its secrets the common property of all Europe. The embassy asked the writer to submit a specimen page of the book to prove his assertion. The specimen was mailed to the embassy and compared. There was no question of its genuineness.

But instead of spending good American gold to retrieve the volume, the then ambassador informed the state department that its code was no longer secret. The man who owned the key may have sold copies to every foreign office in Europe. To buy one copy would be no guaranty that the secret was retrieved.

So it was discarded and the new one adopted. The code now used is made up of arbitrary combinations of five letters each. Each of these arbitrary words, which are pronounceable because of the alternation of consonants and vowels, denotes another word or phrase. There is just one way of discovering what the code word means and that is to look in the key, the code dictionary.

Every department of the government and even several of the bureaus in various departments have their own secret language. Codes are used for two purposes, secrecy and economy. The code is regulated primarily by the requirements of telegraph companies. By international agreement telegraph companies send for the same rate as is charged for a single word any pronounceable combination, in any one of eight languages, of five letters by telegraph or ten letters by cable. If the combination is unpronounceable a charge is made for the transmission of each letter.

New "Yellow Peril."

There is a yellow peril at the White House, and, from the president down, all the inhabitants thereof are in mortal terror of it.

It is a fine young nest of yellow jackets, with stingers that are no respecter of persons.

The yellow jackets were dislodged from their comfortable home in a huge elm in the White House grounds by the recent storm, and are buzzing all over the place now. No one in authority has been stung as yet.

In Desperate Straits.

A storm was raging on the deep; and finally an old lady went to the captain and asked him what hope they had.

"Madam," he replied solemnly, "we are in the hands of the Lord."

The woman flung up her arms in horror, as she cried: "Mercy on us! Has it come to this?"

Dialect "Filler."

"How about that dialect story of yours?" asked the impatient editor. "Coming right along, sir," replied Mr. Penwistle. "I have all the punctuation marks written, and it won't take me more than an hour to fill in the letters."

WAS MOONSHINERS' TARGET

Therefore, Congressman Kirkpatrick of Iowa Carries Around a Large Amount of Lead.

Sam Kirkpatrick of the Sixth Iowa district carries about a ton of lead around underneath his skin—to hear his friends tell it—and, even discounting the stories told about him as much as 90 per cent, he still remains one of the most picturesque characters of the house of representatives. Sam is the man—the only man—who did anything in congress toward getting the United States to pay for the transportation of the District of Columbia veterans who attended the Gettysburg anniversary.

Almost all of his life Sam has been a hunter of moonshiners. That accounts for the lead, and it would almost seem that he has been the favorite target for moonshiners, as he has been shot at so much that he has long since lost count. Thousands of shots must have missed him, but a whole lot of bullets and buckshot did hit him, and he delightfully carries them around with him.

His eyes were badly done up in the last raid he led, so Sam is now about blind, as a portion of his reward for being a revenue officer for the past twenty-seven years. Three times he has been left for dead on the field, the surgeons who worked over him offering to sacrifice their professional reputation if Sam ever opened his eyes again.

But you ought to see the other fellows. It is a good guess if Sam was badly done up the other crowd must have been wiped off the face of the earth.

DUEL WON BEFORE THE FIGHT

Weapons Chosen by Senator Williams, When Challenged, Gets German's Nerves.

In repose Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi is one of the mildest and best-natured and most inoffensive men imaginable, although a debate on the floor of the senate Mr. Williams can show that he has some fire in his make-up. No one would accuse him of being bloodthirsty or of having ever fought a duel. He did once, though.

It was when he was attending the famous Heidelberg university in Germany. A German student challenged John Sharp.

"In Rome do as the Romans do," Mr. Williams counseled himself. Therefore he promptly accepted the challenge.

Being the challenged person, he had choice of weapons. The German was greatly disturbed when the American's second said sabers, the usual duelling device, would not be used. The Yankee fire-eater would fight with United States army revolvers.

This was unheard of and the German the next morning was a wreck. His hand shook and the bullet whizzed by John Sharp several feet distant. The latter calmly aimed at a fleecy cloudlet in the sky and let go.

The principals then shook hands and became fast friends.

IS A MOVING PICTURE FIEND

Senator Clapp of Minnesota Goes the Route Every Evening, So It Is Claimed.

If you happen to be doing the moving picture circuit in upper 14th street—or the Rue de Quarante, as Frenchmen call it—any night, and happen to see a large, dignified body wearing a senatorial toga somewhere in the offing, set it down at once for the form of Senator Clapp of Minnesota, who has been investigating campaign expenses for a long time.

Senator Clapp is the moving picture fiend of the United States senate. He goes the route every evening, so it is claimed, and takes special delight in those theaters where brandnew productions are advertised nightly. He is the five-cent melodrama marathon champion of the United States. He loves to see the hero hop into a hired automobile and chase the villain across the plains; he loves to see the Irish tragedians who take the part of the noble red men of the west; he loves to see the funny man who falls into a barrel of flour; he loves to watch the trick pictures and the Mutt and Jeff stuff that makes the populace rock and howl with laughter. He likes the plain form of amusements. He takes his pleasures simply, cheaply and quickly.

Right off the reel—as it were.

Coal Prices High.

In 1912 the total output of coal in the United States was 534,466,580 short tons, valued at the mines at $695,606,071. The gain in output over 1911 was 38,095,454 short tons and the increase in value was $69,040,860. The average value per ton in 1912 exceeded that of any year during the 33 years for which statistics are available. Only in 1903, the year of the fuel famine, did prices average higher. The figures were compiled by Edward W. Parker, coal statistician for the United States geological survey.

SENATOR AN ADEPT IN HEAD WAITER'S ROLE

Senator Lewis of Illinois has been having some novel encounters with the women suffrage advocates taken to Washington by the demonstration a few days ago.

When the flood of petitions urging the passage of a constitutional amendment poured in upon the senate Colonel Lewis quickly capitulated. But his surrender, which was abject, did not take him beyond the battle lines, and he has had several extremely interesting experiences with suffrage leaders.

At a hotel near the capitol, where he had gone for a hurried meal, Senator Lewis paid the waiter and called for his hat and cane. There being some delay, he walked to the dining room doorway, and had taken the post usually occupied by a head waiter when a suffrage advocate from

DISSATISFIED WITH EMBASSY; PAY TOO SMALL

"If the United States can't maintain embassies and legations abroad as they should be our diplomatic service had better be abolished," said Judge James W. Gerard, recently appointed American ambassador to Germany in Berlin the other day, adding:

"Under existing conditions, and until our people see the necessity of properly providing diplomatic living salaries and embassy buildings it is absurd to talk about a poor man taking the post of ambassador."

"I am beginning to doubt," he continued, "whether this ambassadorship business pays."

The judge is dissatisfied with the present embassy, which he finds too small.

"I could not invite my mother-in-law," he observed. "The president must have been aware of its size and therefore selected a childless ambassador."

Being asked what he estimates it would cost him to suitably maintain the dignity of the United States, he answered:

"Well, one American ambassador who has been in Europe less than a year told me that so far he has spent $128,000, and he did not seem to be making a splurge either."

The judge gave the talk about poor men for diplomats and about diplomatic simplicity a severe jolt in the interview, frankly declaring that he intends to conform to the customs and court of the country to which he has been sent, even to wearing a diplomatic uniform and that he purposes doing everything necessary to give Germans the right idea of the dignity, importance and greatness of America.

WILD BEASTS ARE NOW HER FAVORITE PETS

The pampered lapdog has had his day. His aristocratic nose, what there is of it, is sadly out of joint. He may live in a hygienic kennel and frequent bench shows, where he wins—or doesn't—blue rosettes for his mistress; but he no longer peers from underneath her arm or sits beside her in the limousine, for he has been supplanted by another.

Imagine his feelings, if you can, upon learning that his rival in his lady's affections is a common wild animal.

Titled English women have recently taken to adopting as pets baby beasts from the jungle. The duchess of Sutherland, who was known, until the recent death of the late duke, as the marchioness of Stafford, has a tame infant leopard, which she brought back with her from a recent hunting expedition upon which she accompanied her husband.

THOUSANDS ON ROADS

MISSOURIANS HANDLE PICKS AND SHOVELS IN CAMPAIGN.

Governors From Jefferson City and Topeka and Their Wives Join Workers on Highways.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 21.—Aroused by the new spirit of road building in Missouri, thousands of volunteers marched forth from nearly every county in the state to become a part of Governor Major's army of 350,000 strong, which, in response to his proclamation, began a two days' campaign that was expected to add $2,000,000 in betterments to the public highways of the commonwealth.

This, the first state-wide movement in favor of better roads, was expected not only to mark an epoch in the development of Missouri, but to offer an example that would be followed by other states, and thus lead to the improvement of highways all over the United States.

"This movement will unite the farm and the market," said the road overseers as a message of encouragement to the workers.

"It will bring the city and the country districts closer together," was the reply of the volunteer laborers, who were so brimful of enthusiasm that they needed no encouragement.

A spirit of rivalry among the counties, each of which wanted to make the best record during the two days, promised much for the general result.

"Let ours be the banner county," was the slogan of every community.

Governor and Mrs. Hodges of Kansas came to Missouri to give their active support to the work. They were guests of Governor and Mrs. Major. The two governors donned their overalls and, setting out from Jefferson City, were among the first to get on the field of action. Mrs. Hodges aided in serving to the workers fried chicken which had been prepared by Mrs. Major.

Women took an important part in the campaign. The 6,000 members of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs aided the movement in every way possible, and thousands of farmers' wives and other women prepared and served meals to the workers.

LESSEN ILLS OF TEETHING

Child Will Suffer Little If Given Proper Food and Abundance of Pure Air.

There are probably more children's diseases attributed to teething between the ages of seven and eighteen months to any other cause, and if the causes were wholly known we should find that bad feeding was much more responsible for these conditions than erupting teeth.

There are twenty teeth in the first set, and they begin to emerge from the gums at about seven months. The eruption is completed at about two years. Especially at or just before the eruption of the first tooth there is likely to be more or less irritation of the gum over the growing tooth. The child becomes very restless and irritable, the saliva flows more freely, and more or less stomach or bowel disturbances take place. It is true in this case that the erupting tooth is the primary factor in the disturbance as the growing tooth pushing its way up through the gum tissue produces local irritation and pain which in many cases is so intense as to produce, through the nervous reflexes, excessive impressions on the sense organs of the brain and the organs intimately connected with the teeth. The teething is also responsible for the excessive flow of saliva and disturbances of digestion.

The process of teething should be a natural one without any of these symptoms, and physicians so look upon it, but mothers also believe that it must be painful and that they can do nothing to prevent the irritability of the child. They allow the child to suffer sometimes excessively until the tooth emerges by what is in fact a pathologic process which ought to have been prevented. There are some objections to helping this process by lancing the gum over the emerging tooth, just as there are to other surgical operations; such as the danger of infection, pain of the operation, and the danger of operating prematurely, etc., but when these conditions exist, such objections, in view of the serious complications that may result, should not be allowed to prevail. Serious cases of eye and ear troubles in children and even convulsions have been relieved by simply lancing the gum over an impacted tooth. The operation of lancing the gum over an emerging tooth in a child's mouth is a simple operation that any dentist can easily perform with no great pain or shock to the child. A double or cross incision over the tooth with a pointed semicircular-shaped lancet cutting through to the tooth will relieve the congestion at once and the pain will soon subside. There may be, of course, other diseases not caused by or in any way truly associated with erupting teeth that will not respond to such treatment. Obstructions in the nose or other parts of the breathing tract may cause severe forms of nervous irritation and may also disarrange the digestive functions; this sort of trouble is susceptible, however, to speedy relief following proper treatment.

IMPORTANCE OF BABY TEETH

Every One Should Be Kept Until Replaced by More Firmly Built Adult Teeth.

(By LUTHER HALSEY GULICK, M. D. Copyright by Ladies' Home Journal, 1913.)

The deformities of the face, caused by the habit of mouth breathing, can be corrected by proper treatment. In the case of a boy who was placed under the care of a dentist at the age of four, wonderful results have been shown. A year later the shape of his face was considerably altered, and by the eighth year it was practically normal. When treatment for such defects is delayed until the age of 12 or later the results are not so satisfactory. But even at this age some improvement may be effected although it will not be so marked as that shown in the four-year-old boy. The main lesson is that the mouth-breathing habit should be prevented in babyhood and the necessity for such corrective treatment later would then be avoided.

When small children have anything the matter with their teeth it need be common to say, "It makes little difference, those are just the baby teeth;" and we pulled out the baby teeth instead of filling and taking care of them. The reason why that is bad, and why parents who are careful with their children do not allow it, is that every tooth pulled out of a baby's jaw results in a lessening development of the jaw, affording less room for the permanent teeth when they come. Every baby tooth should be kept until it is replaced by the larger and more firmly built adult tooth. The full contour of the teeth should be preserved, for just to the extent that it is not preserved does the jaw tend to atrophy. Stimulation of development by proper use is as important as prevention of atrophy. Irregular teeth, or teeth that are out of their normal relation to their fellows, not only tend to decay, but by their very abnormal positions numerous little protected areas for the colonization of micro-organisms are formed, which add to that person's susceptibility to infectious disease. The adult teeth begin to come in by the time the child is between five and six years old. Almost every child of six has the large molars coming in. If the baby teeth immediately beside these permanent molars are decaying and are pressed closely against them, the decay will spread as surely as decay spreads in a barrel of apples. This is another reason why the care of the baby teeth is important, inheritance but proper care.

CAUSE OF DECAY IN TEETH

Acids Formed by Decomposing Food Dissolve Teeth Like Sugar Dissolves in Lemonade.

When food decays in the mouth acids are formed which eat into the teeth. They dissolve that tooth just like sugar will be dissolved in lemonade, only not so quickly. For a long time it will not hurt much, if any. Maybe it will hurt a little some day when you take a drink of cold water but it does not ache. But the acid keeps on eating away at the tooth and the hole keeps on getting bigger and bigger, until one day that tooth just aches like everything. And that is the way teeth decay.

Now, I am going to ask you one question. When the week's washing is all ready to be put away, mother picks up your stockings and runs her hand way down inside to the toe. Sometimes she finds a little hole there. When she does find a hole, what does she do? (A voice, "She mends it.") That is right! She mends it. Now, if mother mends that little hole and you put on those stockings again and wear them that little hole becomes a big hole and the next time mother sees it she says, "Oh, my! I wish I had found that and mended it while it was little for it has been getting bigger and bigger and now it will take a good deal longer to mend." Well, that is just the way it is with these holes the acid makes in your teeth. They just keep on getting bigger and bigger. It is much easier and better to mend them when they are little holes than to wait until they become big ones.

Now, here is something I want you to think about. I have told you the rotting or decay of your teeth comes from the rotting or decay of the food left about the necks of the teeth and in between them. Since that is so, don't you think it would be better to try and get rid of that food before it decays? I do! If you do not get rid of it, but just leave it there, after a while you will have little holes in your teeth and they will grow larger and larger, like the hole in your stocking, until they get so large you will have a toothache. And we agree that nobody wants a toothache.

Mrs. Tony's Successor. An organ grinder out in Mattapan appeared the other morning minus his brightly garbed mate, but with a four-legged assistant. "Hello, Tony," said the police officer; "got a horse to pull your organ now, eh?" "Yessa," Tony answered; "da wifa seek."

MINERS ROUTED BY TROOPS

Michigan Strikers Cause Disturbance at Calumet.

Calumet, Mich., Aug. 21.—Cavalry was called out to disperse a mob of copper mine strikers who gathered at a nonunion boarding house and threatened the landlady and boarders with violence. The troops escorted the nonunion men to work.

Arrests were made by the deputies after the arrival of the troops, but this did not end the trouble. At the jail, where no troops were stationed, the wife of one of the arrested men landed a blow on the jaw of an officer. The Calumet and Hecla, and the Superior mines have resumed the shipment of ore to the mills.

Banker's Shortage $358,000.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 21.—The books of the Roseville Trust company show a shortage of $358,000 and Raymond E. Smith, treasurer, is still missing. The amount of the loss, attributed to Smith's manipulations, was established in a report by a special deputy banking commissioner. It far exceeded expectations. Of this sum the loss to the depositors is $169,000.

Mount Nunkam Is Scaled.
Turin, Italy, Aug. 21.—Mount Nunkam, 22,000 feet high and one of the loftiest peaks in the Himalaya mountains, has been scaled. Word was received here from Mario Piacenza, an Italian explorer and mountain climber, that he had reached the summit of the mountain.
